The most challenging lesson, ^{incident} of your life and lesson learnt from it. (300 words)

Challenging incidents in life, are the ones that teach us life lessons. These incidents make us more strong and gives us ability to face hurdles in a better way. May be during the incident we feel uneasy, but it ultimately gives us more strength to strongly face challenges in future. I too had such challenging incident in my life that completely changed my thoughts process and inner strength. This challenging incident was when I came to do my master's in Vellore, that is very far from the place where I belong. This was the first time I lived far from my parents, in hostel. After coming far from parents, I realized that things are not that easy when you are away from them. Even small things, seemed so hard when I came here, as from past twenty-two years I was always with them. And now suddenly, I am so far from them, ~~that~~ ~~it was~~ For almost two months I used to miss them so much, that I couldn't even concentrate on my studies, I used to cry the whole night. But, after some months, with help of some of my friends and the Student councillor of our college, my situation improved a bit. I got to learn many lessons during that phase of my life. I understood that it is not possible to always be in our comfort zone. We need to go out of our comfort space and face the world outside. Things cannot happen according to us, and it is very important to learn things that seems uncomfortable, but is very important for us to get strong internally. It taught me the importance of peace of mind, as I used to become very anxious and could't control my mind at all. ~~This~~ This incident also made me realize that "if I am far from my parents right now, it is just because I am suppose to study hard, face all the hardships and make my parents proud one day. Life is all about such ups and downs, we need to face these hard times strongly to get the good times in life."
